FIT3047 Industrial experience project - Semester 2, 2011

In their final year of study, students are given the opportunity to apply the knowledge and skills they have gained, in the development of an information system for a real world client. Students work in groups and will: design, develop and deliver an information system for a client, manage the project through all its development stages, communicate effectively with all project stakeholders, develop project documentation to a professional standard, present their project work to academics and other groups, attend unit seminars, and contribute in a professional and committed manner to the work of the group.

This is the first of two industrial experience units for most majors in the Bachelor of Information Technology and Systems, the Bachelor of Business Information Systems, the Bachelor of Computing, the Bachelor of Information Systems and the Bachelor of Network Computing. After successful completion of this unit, students must enrol in and pass FIT3048 to complete their industrial experience project requirements.

Academic Overview

Learning Objectives

At the completion of this unit students will be able to:

- understand all stages of the process of developing an information system;
- understand the roles and responsibilities of clients, system users and developers in a systems development project;
- understand how information systems are developed;
- apply, in a practical setting, the theoretical work covered in their course;
- develop a significant computing application, from the analysis and design stages, through coding and implementation to evaluation;
- work with clients and communicate effectively with them;
- define a problem, and gather data, facts, opinions and information needed to analyse and solve it;
- outline and evaluate alternative solutions to a system development problem;
- perform a feasibility study that includes estimates of costs, time requirements, a schedule for the development, and the benefits expected from the system;
- identify hardware and software requirements for a system;
- document a system design using a range of appropriate tools;
- implement a system, including testing and debugging;
- evaluate a system, identifying any weakness or possible enhancements;
- operate effectively as a member of a development team.

Graduate Attributes

1. responsible and effective global citizens who:

- a. engage in an internationalised world
- b. exhibit cross-cultural competence
- c. demonstrate ethical values

critical and creative scholars who:

- a. produce innovative solutions to problems
- b. apply research skills to a range of challenges
- c. communicate perceptively and effectively

Assessment Summary

In-semester assessment: 100%

Assessment Task	Value	Due Date
Practical Assessment - Detailed information about assessment, deliverables and due dates will be provided at each campus.	100%	Please refer to campus specific information on unit website.

Teaching Approach

Studio teaching

Studio teaching is a facilitated active, participatory, peer learning approach.

In this unit we try to simulate a real systems development experience. Groups of students work as a team with support from tutors and academic staff to develop a system for a real client. The seminars focus on revising and addressing specific issues related to the system development process. The studio sessions are there for students to work on their project and to receive help from tutors and academic staff.

Feedback

Our feedback to You

Types of feedback you can expect to receive in this unit are:

- Informal feedback on progress in labs/tutes
- Graded assignments with comments
- Test results and feedback

Your feedback to Us

Monash is committed to excellence in education and regularly seeks feedback from students, employers and staff. One of the key formal ways students have to provide feedback is through SETU, Student Evaluation of Teacher and Unit. The University's student evaluation policy requires that every unit is evaluated each year. Students are strongly encouraged to complete the surveys. The feedback is anonymous and provides the Faculty with evidence of aspects that students are satisfied and areas for improvement.
