FIT3048 Industrial experience project - Summer semester, 2012

In their final year of study, students are given the opportunity to apply the knowledge and skills they have gained, in the development of an information system for a real world client. Students work in groups and will: design, develop and deliver an information system for a client, manage the project through all its development stages, communicate effectively with all project stakeholders, develop project documentation to a professional standard, present their project work to academics and other groups, attend unit seminars, and contribute in a professional and committed manner to the work of the group.

This is the second of two industrial experience units for most majors in the Bachelor of Information Technology and Systems and the Bachelor of Business Information Systems. After successful completion of FIT3047 and this unit, students will have completed their industrial experience project requirements.

Academic Overview

Outcomes

At the completion of this unit students will be able to:

- understand all stages of the process of developing an information system;
- understand the roles and responsibilities of clients, system users and developers in a systems development project;
- understand how information systems are developed;
- apply, in a practical setting, the theoretical work covered in their course;
- develop a significant computing application, from the analysis and design stages, through coding and implementation to evaluation;
- work with clients and communicate effectively with them;
- define a problem, and gather data, facts, opinions and information needed to analyse and solve it;
- outline and evaluate alternative solutions to a system development problem;
- perform a feasibility study that includes estimates of costs, time requirements, a schedule for the development, and the benefits expected from the system;
- identify hardware and software requirements for a system;
- document a system design using a range of appropriate tools;
- implement a system, including testing and debugging;
- evaluate a system, identifying any weakness or possible enhancements;

Teaching Approach

Work-integrated learning or industry-based learning

In this unit we try to simulate a real systems development experience. Groups of students work as a team with support from tutors and academic staff to develop a system for a real client. This teaching approach is experiential learning with active learner involvement in a practical environment. Reflection is used to conceptualise the experience.

Feedback

Our feedback to You

Types of feedback you can expect to receive in this unit are:

- Informal feedback on progress in labs/tutes
- Graded assignments with comments
- Interviews

Your feedback to Us

Monash is committed to excellence in education and regularly seeks feedback from students, employers and staff. One of the key formal ways students have to provide feedback is through SETU, Student Evaluation of Teacher and Unit. The University's student evaluation policy requires that every unit is evaluated each year. Students are strongly encouraged to complete the surveys. The feedback is anonymous and provides the Faculty with evidence of aspects that students are satisfied and areas for improvement.

For more information on Monash's educational strategy, and on student evaluations, see:
